Redditech User's Guide

Login

The first screen you will meet is the Login/account screen.

Simply press the login button. You will be redirected either to the reddit app or a web browser asking you to either authorize our refuse the _redditech_ app to access your information.

Now you gave the application your credentials (be assured that we never get to store your password. In fact, you give it to reddit auth service, not to the app itself) you will be sent back to the initial screen.

Settings

Int the settings tab nav, you may change some of your personal settings such as the auth page language, email notifications, show explicit content or show other users your presence.
Navigation

My Subreddits

In this navigation tab, you will be able to find all the subreddits that you joined.

You have all the basics information:

- Number of subscribers
- URL
- description
- verified community
- sub's icon

you can see the posts of a subreddit by tapping on the subreddit.

Posts

Once you are consulting posts from a subreddit you can scroll down the screen and see a sample of the posts from this subreddit. You can filter with the buttons upper row:

- top: displays the top posts
- hot: displays the currently most popular posts
- best: displays the best posts
- new: displays the latest posts

Going back

To go back to the previous screen, hit your phone's return arrow.

Search

In this navigation tab, will be accessible a search bar. Type in a key word and will be proposed a list of the most relevant subreddits compared to your keyword.

As for any subreddit list of the app, you can scroll down and tap on the sub that you want to consult.
